During my studies in the School of Law, I participated in most of the tutorial courses. In the context of Civil Law lectures, I wrote an essay concerning fictitiousness in Civil Law, whereas in the context of Ecclesiastic Law lectures I wrote an essay concerning the relations between the Church and the State during the period of Persecutions. In April 1980, I was awarded the University Degree of Law with GPA: Excellent – Distinction (9 & 1/8) and I was ranked 1st among the other graduates.

After the award of my degree, in September 1980, I was registered at the University of Long (King's College) for postgraduate studies in Commercial Law and the Law of the European Communities. More specifically, I attended the following courses: Law of European Institutions, Law of European Competition, Law of European Community, Law of Human Rights and Fundamental Rights. During my studies I participated in the organized seminars and I presented the projects “The Extra Territorial Jurisdiction of the EEC”, in the context of competition and “The action against Member States under the Art.169 of the EEC Treaty”, in the context of the course of European Institutions Law. In October 1983, I started collecting the relevant legislation and literature, in the context of writing my PhD dissertation with the topic “Know-how Concession in the Community Legal Order of Competition” under the supervision of the late Professor of Labour Law Alkis Argyriadis.

The processing of the legislation and the completion of the relevant material gathering was elaborated in the Institute of Advanced Legal Studies of the University of London, of which I became a member in June 1982. I lived in London from July 1984 until March 1985, where, under the supervision of the Professors Mr. Fr. Jacobs and Mr. Val. Korah, I wrote my PhD dissertation. The writing was completed in the Study area of the Commercial and Maritime Law of the University of Athens. The project was submitted as a PhD dissertation to the Department of Law of the School of Law, Economic and Political Sciences of the University of Athens, after the proposal of the professors of Commercial Law Alkis Argyriadis, Leonidas Georgakopoulos and Mr. Nikolaos Rokas, members of the Three Member Introductory Committee and the professors Mr. Th. Liakopoulos and Mr. E. Perakis, which together with the pre-mentioned professors constituted the committee. In December 1986, I was nominated as Doctor of the School of Law (PhD) of the University of Athens with GPA “Excellent – Distinction”. My dissertation was published in 1987 by the publishing
